Introduction

The Martha Washington Papers consist of correspondence related to General George Washington's death in 1799, a subject file containing letters received by her husband, and letters, legal documents, and bills and receipts related to the settlement of his estate. There is also a subject file containing material relating to the settlement of her estate, which may have come to Tudor Place when Thomas Peter served as an executor of her will.

These papers were a part of the estate Armistead Peter placed under the auspices of the Carostead Foundation, Incorporated, in 1966; the name of the foundation was changed to Tudor Place Foundation, Incorporated, in 1987. Use and rights of the papers are controlled by the Foundation. The collection was processed and the register prepared by James Kaser, a project archivist hired through a National Historical Records and Publications grant in 1992. This document was reformatted by Emily Rusch and revised by Tudor Place archivist Wendy Kail in 2020.

Biographical Sketch

Martha Dandridge (1731-1802) married Daniel Parke Custis (1711-1757), son of John Custis IV, a prominent resident of Williamsburg, Virginia, in 1749. The couple had four children, two of whom survived: John Parke Custis (1754-1781) and Martha Parke Custis (1755/6-1773). Daniel Parke Custis died in 1757; Martha (Dandridge) Custis married General George Washington in 1759 and joined him at Mount Vernon, Virginia, with her two children. According to family legend, General George Washington raised John Parke and Martha Parke Custis as his own son and daughter. At Mount Vernon Martha Washington skillfully maintained her new home and administered to her extended family's needs. During the Revolutionary War years she frequently endured the hardship of travel to join her husband and encourage him and the American forces in their effort. As First Lady she performed the tasks appropriate to her position, although she longed to return to the tranquility of Mount Vernon, a wish eventually fulfilled.

Her son John Parke Custis married Eleanor Calvert (1756/7-1811) in 1774 and four children were born of this union, including a daughter in 1777, Martha Parke Custis, who became Martha (Custis) Peter. John Parke Custis served as Washington's volunteer aide-de-camp at Yorktown and in 1781 died of camp fever after visiting a British hospital. John Parke Custis' widow, Eleanor Calvert Custis, then married Dr. David Stuart (1753-1814). At the Stuart's home, Hope Park, ten miles west of Alexandria, Virginia, Thomas Peter married Martha Parke Custis in 1795.

The eight and one-half acres and the structures upon it that became Tudor Place were purchased with an $8,000 inheritance accorded Martha (Custis) Peter from her stepgrandfather General George Washington. After her grandmother Martha Washington's death in 1802, Martha (Custis) Peter inherited the 1796 engraving of General George Washington by Thomas Cheesman after John Trumbull's portrait George Washington at the Battle of Trenton, and her grandmother's writing desk. In the desk two letters were discovered that George Washington had written to his wife as he took command of the Continental Army in 1775.

Scope and Content

After General George Washington's death in 1799, the government, various organizations, and individuals wanted to honor him and Martha Washington was obliged to respond to these various requests. The most important request was made by President John Adams, who asked that Washington's body be moved and placed under a memorial to be constructed in the Federal City. A copy of the letter written on her behalf in which she acquiesces to this is in the collection. Citizens also sent her copies of funeral sermons and orations in honor of her departed husband, and she was required to thank them. She was granted the franking privilege of sending and receiving mail without charge by Congress, through a document in the collection. Letters of request and the responses to the requests are often in the hand of Tobias Lear, General George Washington's secretary, who continued in that role for his employer's wife for a brief period of time.

Another set of responsibilities after the death of her husband related to the settlement his estate, evidenced by the presence of bills and receipts, as well as a number of legal opinions concerning matters relating to the estate. This material may have come to Tudor Place through Thomas Peter's role as an executor of her estate. The collection also includes an inventory from the estate sale held after her death in 1802, provenance for many items now at Tudor Place that were purchased at the sale.
